

A LIBERAL EDUCATION FOR ANY YOUNG MAN

"There goes a young fellow who will leave his mark in this world. He is making good in his present position because he is alert and wideawake. Despite the fact that he is busily employed every minute during the day, he is acquiring a liberal education, and his tuition is costing only one cent a day and five cents on Sunday. Now don't smile! Let me explain.

"This young fellow is just the average young man of today, earning the average salary paid to a beginner in the race for a place in the business world. Outside of his actual living expenses he has little to spare for education and recreation. He, like many other young men, confines his reading to the daily press, but, unlike many, he has selected a clean, carefully edited, complete newspaper. Sensations and thrills were not what he craved. He wanted information. He felt that in order to be up-to-date he must keep posted on what the world was doing politically, socially, scientifically and in a business way.

"Realizing that he was spending the developing years of his life in Washington—the Nation's Capital—the center of everything that's really worth while in this great country of ours, he decided to make the most of his golden opportunities and became a studious reader of the leading newspaper published in this city.

"He rightly concluded that things happened in Washington that did not and never could happen in any other city in the United States. If he could be in a dozen different places at the same time he realized how impossible it would be for him to hear and learn everything that was going on. He couldn't hear the proceedings in both wings of the Capitol and the Supreme Court at the same time. And while at one or the other of these interesting places he would be sure to miss some important event at the White House.

"There was one solution to the problem—the newspaper. That far-reaching collator of information and news offered him just what his craving for practical knowledge required. There isn't a nook or corner in the city nor a civilized community on the face of the globe that isn't reached by the news-seeking arm of the leading newspaper of Washington. This news is put to the reader in the most accurate, most retainable form, by men trained to write concisely, completely and truthfully.

"Besides the news and information of a practical sort, this same newspaper bends its best efforts to furnish the young man with accurate and interesting details regarding all healthful, entertaining sports and recreations, because a thorough knowledge of such is essential to every growing lad with red blood in his veins.

"And on Sunday his newspaper shows him the serious side of life, entertains him with clean fiction to stimulate his imagination, rouses his ambition with magazine articles on the accomplishments of the world's leading scientific and inventive geniuses, and stimulates a hearty laugh with the cleverest 'comics' of the age.

"When I tell you, then, that this young fellow never retires for the night without first having read his newspaper carefully and studiously, you will appreciate how it is possible for him to be so keenly alive and so thoroughly in touch with what's really worth while in the progress of the world today.

"Oh, yes, about the small cost of his tuition, I was about to add that he pays 45 cents a month to have The Star delivered regularly and promptly 'From the Press to His Home Within the Hour' every afternoon and Sunday morning.

"Any young man who cherishes a smoldering spark of ambition can test this educational plan for himself, and it is reasonable to predict that after he has enjoyed its evenly balanced dividends of instruction and entertainment it will grow on him as a habit—a habit he will never feel inclined to shake."

LANE BRINGS TEARS AT OPENING OF FAIR

Secretary Declares Journey of American Pioneer at End at Panama Exposition.

ALL RECORDS ARE BROKEN BY ATTENDANCE FIRST DAY

Admissions at 4 O'clock in Afternoon Had Reached Total of 225,000.

EXPOSITION GROUNDS, SAN FRANCISCO, February 20.—The Panama-Pacific international exposition was formally opened at noon today, Pacific coast time. All records for exposition first-day attendance were broken at the opening. By 4 o'clock this afternoon the turnstiles had clicked off 225,000 admissions, and it was expected that by midnight the total would have reached more than 300,000. The previous record was at the opening day of the St. Louis world's fair, 176,455, in 1904.

The crowd was a spectacle in itself. It filled the grandstands, it packed the great courts and colonnades, it poured through the aisles, it overflowed from the sidewalks into the avenues, from the hills to the bay, as far as the eye could reach in unending rivers of bobbing heads.

Tears in Many Eyes.

As the President's personal envoy, Secretary Lane was heard with the closest attention. In the more solemn passages of his oration the vibrations of his voice stirred the audience in sympathy and there were tears in many eyes as he pointed to the "golden age" of the American pioneer, standing beside two oxen, which looked down upon the court of the nations, where east and west come face to face.

That figure was the American pioneer. His sufferings and triumphs were the orator's theme. The exhibition was his house in which should be fought the gospel of an advancing democracy. Without him there had been no exposition, no San Francisco.

At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, in the presence of a distinguished gathering, President Wilson pressed a gold telegraph key that flashed to San Francisco the electric spark that set in motion all the machinery of the great Panama-Pacific exposition. The incident was simple in itself, but appealed strongly to the imagination of those present. It was a pressure upon the key also notified the Tuckerton wireless station, and that station started to the wireless apparatus in the Mare Island navy yard the mysterious force that carried a duplicate message.

President Wilson sent no message to the exposition authorities, Secretary Lane of the Interior Department having been at the exposition grounds as the personal representative of the President and the administration. Just before the opening of the exposition received a telegraphic message from the exposition officials thanking him for his efforts for the exposition. When the President removed his hand from the big gold nugget on top of the gold key the assembled guests applauded him, extending congratulations.

Teak Place in East Room. The wire connection for the event were placed in the east room, the key being on a small table arranged for the occasion. The wires connected Washington, San Francisco and Tuckerton. The instrument used is the most famous telegraph key in the United States. It is of solid silver, set upon a small slab of beautiful marble. All around the marble are gold nuggets of great value. The instrument is studded at different places with nuggets, the largest being upon the key itself.

The instrument was presented to President Taft at the time of the opening of the Alaska-Yukon exposition in June, 1909, and was a gift from George W. Carman, the discoverer of gold in Alaska. A gold plate upon the marble tells the history of the instrument. President Taft gave the instrument to Secretary Lane, chief telegraph operator at the White House, and Smithers takes it out only on great occasions like that of yesterday.

There is one other gold telegraph key in the country. It was the property of Mr. V. De Graw, an assistant postmaster general for many years, newspaper man prior to taking public office, and prior to that an expert telegraph operator. This key was presented to President Roosevelt when the St. Louis exposition was opened some years ago. He thought of De Graw, his personal friend, and asked De Graw to accept it. This key is in the family of Mr. De Graw now.

Mr. Smithers has handled many events similar to that of yesterday for Presidents. He had been at the White House many years, and the pressing of a key to open some public enterprise is not an unusual event in his eyes. An ordinary telegraph key, however, is generally used.

Those with the President in the east room were members of the cabinet, the senators and representatives from California, Charles S. Hamlin, chairman of the federal reserve board, and other officials.

Believe Race Hatred Is on the Decline. NEW YORK, February 20.—Race hatred is giving way to the spirit of brotherhood and democracy is gaining over aristocracy, in the opinion of Prof. William Sloane of Columbia University, and of Dr. Toyokichi Iyenaga, formerly of the University of Chicago, who were the principal speakers today in a discussion on this topic by college professors at the Republican Club.

Situation in Europe. The present situation in Europe, the speaker asserted, is due not to rulers or merchants, but to bureaucrats. "We have to keep their jobs by fanning the fire of race prejudice." The aristocrat in this country, he added, is the political boss.

Inequalities Admitted. Inequality among races, Dr. Iyenaga said, is indisputable, but injustice comes when the color of the skin is made the criterion of equality. The best cure for race prejudice, he thought, is knowledge and association. "We Japanese beg for no grace, but will stand on our own merit," he said. "I find the Americans the most fair."

The prisoner admitted his identity and returned to Philadelphia with the detective.

Reiher was employed as salesman in the store of Henry W. Fletcher, 5600 Germantown avenue, Germantown, and it is charged that he obtained about $500 from a cashier in the store, who, it is stated, is under arrest in Philadelphia on a charge of embezzlement.

Hundreds of Washington Women

Will Cook Today's Dinner in a

Thermatic Fireless Cooker

HUNDREDS of Washington families will sit down to dinner today cooked in a Thermatic Fireless Cooker. "Mother" didn't have to spend several hours in a hot, stifling kitchen. She placed her food in a "Thermatic" early. She went to church, and was content with the knowledge that the Sunday dinner would be cooked perfectly when she returned. No trouble, no watching and no danger of burning. WHY SHOULD YOUR WIFE OR MOTHER SPEND THE WHOLE DAY in the kitchen?

Thermatic Fireless Cookers can roast, bake, boil or stew, and better, too, than can be done in coal or gas ranges. Your food can't "boil away" and "lose weight" in a Thermatic. The automatic steam valve controls this.

Exclusive Thermatic Features That Have Made the Thermatic "THE COOKER"

Automatic Steam Valve. All-Metal Case. Non-Rustable Lining. Steam-Tight Case. Adjustable Oven Support. Ground Cork and Magnesite Insulation.
